. Heard. Rule. Returnable forthwith.

2. The application of the petitioner for furlough has been considered by the competent authority as directed. The petitioner over-stayed his parole leave by 112 days. His explanation was sought. He has shown treatment taken by him on the ground of illness for 62 days. That treatment was available to him even in jail. Hence, his application was rejected. The petitioner over-stayed for 112 days. The petitioner has no remission to his credit and hence his name was deleted from the remission list for a period of five years. This is not a matter under challenge. The order cannot be faulted. Hence, the petitioner's application has rightly been rejected. The petition is dismissed. Rule discharged.
